Bio

Steven Soto is an aspiring film and stage actor based in the Washington metropolitan area. He can be seen in a few regional commercials for Mattress Warehouse<sup>SM</sup>. Soto was born in Hollywood, Florida and is of Cuban and Puerto Rican descent. His professional career commenced after he graduated from the National Conservatory of Dramatic Arts in Washington, D.C. He made his television debut on Investigation Discovery's I Was Murdered as Johnny DeSouza in "Final Delivery" and afterwards, he went on to play Isaiah Taylor in "He's Right There" on A&E's Panic 9-1-1. Soto took off some of the edge by performing locally in a couple of shows for children with NextStop Theatre Company, first as MC Dog in P.D. Eastman's Go, Dog. Go!, then as Idol in Good Good Trouble on Bad Bad Island. Moving forward, Soto accepted a much more mature role as Rodriguez in the critically acclaimed Take Me Out with 1st Stage in Tysons.

Along with acting, Steven Soto is a singer and writer. His long term goal is to achieve success by acting in feature films and he hopes to display his singing and writing skills as well. Soto expresses his sincerest gratitude to his wife, sons, family and friends for their love, motivation, support and guidance.
